Frederic and Lucy, coasting to southern ports and Maine with lumber; capsized off Cape Cod; taken from bottom of freight vessel by Schooner "Concord", when I remained at home four months. In the winter attended school. Went as sailor in ships "Gov. Troop", "Florence", and "John W. Gates", second officer Brig "Camille", first officer Brig "Galena" and Ship "Wm. C. Nye"; then twelve voyages to Madeira in Ship "Mexican"; last voyage Madeira to St. Petersburg. Took command of Brig "Cumberland" at the age of twenty-five, going from New York to Charleston, S.C., back to New York, from there to Havana, Matanzas, with sugar to Trieste, returned to New York with general cargo; 1843 and 1844 to Montevidio, Buenos Aires and Colonia, two voyages. My third voyage, remained in South America over a year, trading between Brazil, Rio da la Plata and Paraguay, buying and selling cargo on ship's account. Rosas, dictator of the Argentine Republic, closed the river Parana against commerce. France and England intervened, gave notice that they would convoy any vessels up the river that would like to go as far as the province of Paraguay. I chartered with our other American vessels to go under convoy of seven men of war, four English, three French. We were the first to wave the "stars and stripes" on the river Parana. There were thirty-five vessels in the fleet of different nations. We rendezvoused at the mouth of the Parana until the men of war could take the fortifications further up. In about three weeks were ordered to proceed, forts being taken. Nothing worthy of note occurred until we approached near St. Nicholas, when we were signalized to anchor. In about four hours weighed anchor and proceeded to St. Nicholas, where we found Str. "Firebrand" with hammocks in her top and it looked as if there might be some fighting. As the "Cumberland" came abreast of the Steamer, the "Firebrand" fired her bow gun. This attracted my attention ahead. The enemy had three field pieces on the bank, firing at the fleet as they passed. The "Firebrand" soon drove them a little way up the river, out of range, but we passed them under fire. Having a good sailer, was the second to get by with one shot through mainsail, part of taffrail shot away. Arrived at Goya in Corrientes, my port of destination, part of the fleet proceeded to Paraguay. We were three months getting up the river and remained at Goya three months waiting for cargo of jerked beef. Started down river under convoy with fleet of sixty vessels. The enemy had built a fort at St. Nicholas while we were up the river. Coming down the men of war engaged the forts while the fleet passed. Three vessels went ashore and were burned. Arrived at Montevidio with cargo of beef for Havana. There my ship was damaged in the great hurricane of October, 1846. Sold vessel for benefit of all concerned. So ended Brig "Cumberland". Under the American flag I returned to New York. While in Havana was very sick with yellow fever.

One or two little incidents happened while going up the river: After passing the batteries at St. Nicholas while at anchor, I visited the Sch. Hannah, Capt. Woodman, a jolly whole-souled fellow. He had been on shore under fire of the enemy, ran his kedge out, hauled his vessel off and weighed anchor - wouldn't slip it. He said he was almost scared to death but his pride wouldn't let him be laughed at by Hadley and others. So he brought the kedge with him.

Further up, when we were at anchor for several days, Woodman came alongside and asked if we were hungry. I said "yes". "Do you see those cattle on shore?" "Yes, and I see soldiers guarding them." We were brave and about twenty of us agreed that we were strong enough to take them, so, with a flag of truce fixed to a bayonet, we proceeded, Woodman bringing up the rear with his rifle, swearing he would shoot the first man to run. The soldiers met us and said we were able to take the cattle, but it would be at the cost of their lives; if we would return peacefully, that night, they would bring us the meat. We did and they kept their word.

My next command was barque Patriot under the Brazilian flag, sailing from New York to Genoa, thence to Queenstown for orders with corn (the year of the great famine in Ireland) discharged at Londonderry, thence to Troon, Scotland, to load coal for Rio de Janiero, back to New York with coffee. This was the only time I sailed under a foreign flag. The Patriot was owned by Silas E. Buroughs. Mr. Buroughs bought her in Montevidio, paying fifteen per cent on valuation for her to sail under the Brazilian flag, supposed to go to Rio for papers, but instead came to New York. When I was ready to sail, was informed the ship had no register. I hesitated but said, "If you will risk your ship, I will risk myself", for if by chance she were boarded by a Brazilian cruiser she would be a lawful prize. The Brazilian consul in New York gave us permission to proceed. In Genoa I was consigned to the Brazilian consul there, who gave me permission to go to Queenstown (then Cove of Cork - name afterward changed in honor of a visit from the Queen). At Troon the Brazilian consul informed me my papers were not worth a straw (he being a bright Scotchman) and hesitated about my proceeding. I told him I was going to Rio for legal documents. He consented.

Mr. Buroughs was at one time a very prominent merchant in New York. At the started to get ready for the Plymouth County Regional Track Meet. The Meet took place on May 8 at Bridgewater Middle School. The weather was beautiful and the competition exciting. In addition to the above-mentioned students, Sandra Tuttle, Joan Murray, Melissa Beale, and Ramona Frates participated. The highlight of the day took place when Joshua Hathaway won the first place medal in the mile race. By the end of the day the team earned nine first place medals, one second place medal, and three third place medals. Four or five of these athletes should be eligible for the state meet which will take place on June 15 and 16.

The Massachusetts Special Olympic program runs year round and includes other events such as swimming, volleyball, bowling, basketball and others. Every four years an international competition takes place somewhere in the United States. This year the internationals will take place in New York. Hopefully, one of our athletes will make it that far.

Local Phone Directory

The Marion-Mattapoisett League of Women Voters has started work on the second edition of its phone directory of the two towns. Every effort is being made in the next week to verify address changes and new listings. The contacts for residents who are new, moved or were listed incorrectly last time or who are omitted by the regular phone book and wish to be included in this local one are: Mary Betts, Pine Island Road, Mattapoisett, 758-6456 (incorrect number last week); and Jay Crowley, 604 Point Road, Marion, 748-0117. A post card stating exactly the listing desired will ensure the greatest accuracy.

Arts Festival

On June 2 and 3 the Seventh Creative Arts Festival will bring to a close the Spring Concert Series sponsored by the Arts Council of the Unitarian Memorial Church in Fairhaven. This is the annual celebration held in memory of the late Henry H. Rogers, great philanthropist and benefactor of Fairhaven, his boyhood home and summer residence in later years. A New York millionaire, Mr. Rogers shared his fortune very liberally throughout the community.

At the Sunday morning service, June 3, Mr. Kenneth R. Vining, President of the Fairhaven Historical Society, will participate with the Reverend Robert A. Thayer, Minister, in a re-dedication of the many buildings given by Mr. Rogers, among which the Memorial Church of Fairhaven is the crowning glory.

The Festival opens on Saturday afternoon, June 2, in the Parish House, corner of Green and Centre Streets. The Exhibition this year will feature International Arts and Crafts, a superb display of artifacts Pavone traveled to Bermuda where the Tabor Tones and TAJ Jazz Combo enjoyed the privilege and pleasure of participating in the International Music Festival in Bermuda at the end of April. Beside the usual sightseeing, swimming, shopping and performing, the boys had the singular honor of singing for His Excellency, the Governor of Bermuda, in a special ceremony of dedication for Sea Cadets at the Wesley Methodist Church in downtown Hamilton. Led by their director, Mr. Pavone, the boys sang various sacred selections including an appropriate calypso anthem accompanied by Robert Bradgon on flute and Vincent Lancisi on guitar. Billy Howell's trumpet fanfares lent a festive flair to the occasion which was broadcast throughout the islands.

Such exciting experiences have been the key to the planning and promotion of the Music Department at Tabor Academy under the direction of Mr. Pavone. For the first time in its history, Tabor, through its talented young musicians, has taken part in regional band festivals and competitions. Instrumentalists have achieved the distinction of being selected for Mass. District Band Festivals and the All-State Orchestra. The Brass Choir performed not only for ceremonies on campus but also in the presence of such dignitaries as the Bishop of London. Singers and bell-ringers performed to hundreds of Christmas shoppers at the Boston Public Library in Copley Square. Local performances by the Glee Club and Stage Band have been very much in demand among community churches and organizations. Who can forget the lively performance of the Jazz Combo at the Bicentennial Ball or the festive flourish of voices, bells and brass in the Fairhaven "Cathedral"? Alumni and parents alike were thrilled by the sound of the Glee Club and Band at such diverse places as the Harvard Club of Bos-

Three annual Music Festivals hosted both professional and amateur musicians from the Boston-Providence area. Tabor Boys teamed up with a variety of girls' schools such as Lincoln, Wheeler, Brimmer and May, Dana Hall and Notre Dame to perform works by Mozart, Pergolesi, PDQ Bach-often accompanied by orchestra.

Ending on a "high" note, the Music Department will present its final concert of the year on Friday, May 25th, as the band plays selections from the popular and classical repertoire on the balcony (outdoors) of Hoyt Hall facing Sippican Harbor. The program will begin at 7:00 P.M. and will continue indoors with a student recital including guitar, piano, flute, voice and electronic music. This latter part of the program will be held in the Music Rehearsal Room on the second floor of Hoyt Hall.

The public is cordially invited to an evening of musical pleasure.

July 4th Fair

The Wareham Board of Selectmen has voted to grant the Wareham Historical Society permission to hold its 3rd annual Fourth of July on the Town Green, opposite the old Town Hall on Main Street. Society President George C. Decas has announced that Mrs. Rita Candee will be chairman of the event.

Although the many antique dealers, craftsmen and civic organizations who had space last year have been invited to participate again, Mrs. Candee has extended a public invitation to anyone interested in space, on a first-come-first-serve basis. Good space is still available, and she urges anyone interested to call Mr. Robert Dowd of 204 Marion Road by writing or calling him at

A new feature of the fair will be an expanded and continuous snack bar featuring local delicacies such as quahog chowder and homemade foods. Donations for the snack bar are being accepted by the food chairmen, Ann Reed and Alma Flint.

The Society's Fearing Tavern will be open throughout the day for viewing by the public. The museum is located next to the Town Green, where the fair will be held.

Preparations are also being made for some protection in the event of rain, and the fair will be held rain or shine.

The fair is Wareham's major Fourth of July event and, according to Mrs. Candee, large numbers of local and summer residents have attended in the past because they have been able to enjoy the holiday without the necessity of distant travel.

The Monday afternoon game featured eleven tables in play with New Bedford's Leona Rosenberg and Dartmouth's Edythe Lipman taking North-South honors just ahead of the Fairhaven entry of Jeff Mc-Abee and Bob D'Anjou. Others finishing in the winner's circle included the Mattapoisett team of Estelle Biehl with Helen DeMello, Pearl Mahoney of Fall River with Mildred Hunt of Fairhaven and also Bill Noyes of Bourne with Jean Rogers of Fairhaven.

East-West honors went again to Mattapoisett as Marian Lammey and Virginia Banks played a flawless game to edge out a valiant effort by Marion's Irma Hall with Eleanor Linberg of Fairhaven. Plymouth's Dot Staples teamed with Marion's Judy Harrison to take third place. The final masterpoint awards went, by virtue of a tie, to: Joanne Greaves, Lil Johnson and Helen Davis of Dartmouth, Marie Noyer and Leona Pierce of Fairhaven, and Ruth Robinson of Marion.

time I commanded the Patriot he was traveling in Russia. For favors done the Russian government, received from the Emperor his portrait set in diamonds.

My next command was Ship Ambassador owned by Taylor Merrill of New York. In 1848, went from New York to Appalachicola, thence to Boston with cotton, thence to Mobile, from there to Liverpool with cotton, back to New York with salt, then to Mobile, then Genoa with cotton, back to Appalachicola and New York.

My last voyage to Genoa, 1849, the Genoese declared Genoa a Republic, the Sardinians or government party being outside the walls, the Genoese occupying the city. Earl of Hardwicke, in command of British line of battle ship, advocated the government's cause, but for some reason was allowed at the councils of the Genoese. One of his speeches was about this: "I am the Earl of Hardwicke. I own a county in England. I know the honors of war. I have taken her Majesty's ship of war for my yacht, " etc., etc.

Our American man of war was Str. Princeton, Capt. Ingalls, was then at Genoa. Her officers were also admitted to the Genoese councils, whose principles they strongly advocated (and by them I was posted). Soon Earl Hardwicke took a very active part against the Genoese. The Sardinians had entered the gate on the opposite side of the harbor and were fighting their way toward the Doria palace. My ship was moored near the Revolutionists' batteries on the Nole and we Yankees had lots of fun helping train the guns. My vessel recieved a descending shot from the Sardinians, taking out three planks on port bow and glanced overboard. One morning Earl Hardwicke in his gig pulled near the batteries (and near our vessel), ordering them not to fire upon the enemy in these words: "Avast! Avast there! or I will open fire on you." As he departed they saluted him by firing a thirty-two pounder over his head, making the old fellow dodge.

Then he was mad, immediately put springs on his cables and hammocks in the tops ready for action. The Genoese sent him a letter (I think the Yankees encouraged them to do it) about like this: "Earl of Hardwicke, you arrived here in command of a ship from a friendly nation. You received the hospitalities of the Port. You have taken side with our enemy. Your ship is now in a fighting attitude. If your ship is not put in a peaceful position before six p.m., we will blow her out of water, a circumstance that will teach the British government to give their ships to men of sense as well as rank."

On receipt of the letter, the Earl took it to the Comander of the Princeton. Capt. Ingalls replied that he thought the Genoese would not hestiate to carry out their threat (being informed of its contents before the Earl arrived), but said, "I will get up steam and tow your ship to sea", and did go so far as to order all of his officers and men at liberty on board. I met the purser of the Princeton and asked what was up: "Only a little fun." Earl Hardwicke soon put his ship in a peaceful position and was allowed to remain. In a few days the Sardinians took the city, and the Princeton took the leaders of the Revolution to Leghorn. While lying at Genoa, my sailors thought they would have a Revolution and went so far that I called Capt. Ingalls to read them the "Riot Act". They finally deserted and when ready for sea, I shipped a new crew, towed outside harbor with row boats (at that time there were no tugs). Being calm, we anchored in rather a dangerous poistion. Soon after a boat belonging to the British man of war was seen coming, I supposed to offer some assistance, but nearing the barque, found it contained several of my old crew.

My chief officer received theirs at the gangway and escorted him aft. He brought the following message: "The Earl of Hardwicke sends his compliments and wishes to know why you do not pay these sailors. They are English subjects holding registry tickets." I, pointing to the "stars and stripes", replied: "They shipped under that flag. If they want redress, they must go to the American Consul." The officer said Earl Hardwicke did not intend to demand their pay, but would represent it to the British government. "My compliments to Earl of Hardwicke and tell him I think the British government has something else to do beside taking up the cause of drunken American sailors," and bade him good day.

After the surrender of the city, I went sight-seeing, visited the Doria palace, where some of the severest fighting took place, saw the barricade they had built with cotton from the "Ambassador". The palace - a beautiful building - was damaged outside only by musket balls, but the interior and furnishings were a wreck.
